

2011-12 CMA STUDENT AMBASSADOR – Kevin Ngo – University of Guelph-Humber – Bachelor of Business Administration

Hi my name is Kevin Sy-Minh Ngo. I am currently in my fourth year of studies majoring in Accounting at the University of Guelph-Humber. My passion in life is to take challenges head on and overcome them, and try all of the different kinds of foods in the world.

Why Accounting?

To some people accounting is a really boring subject that requires big calculators and thousands of balance sheets, but not to me. I see accounting as an art, where the final product of the financial statement is a big picture that tells a story about a particular company. Just like the old cliché “A picture is worth a thousand words”, an accountant would analyze and interpret the financial statements to derive meaningful information that would contribute to the overall benefit of the company and its shareholders. We can even consider some of the accountants who prepare the financial statements to be artists themselves. Their objective is to accurately portray and display the financial position of any given company such that stakeholders can make sound decisions based on the information given. This I believe makes accounting a very essential part of any business.

I am very excited to be the new CMA ambassador and will gladly help with any inquires that you may have regarding the CMA Designation. My goal for the year would be to raise awareness and educate students about the CMA designation and where it can take you. I plan to achieve this by engaging the student body through engagement in various events and social networking events.
