

2011-12 CMA STUDENT AMBASSADOR – Mitchell Clark – Ryerson University – Business Management: Accounting and Business Communications

My name is Mitchell Clark. I am a 4th year student in the Business Management program at Ryerson University with a major in accounting and a minor in business communications. In the future with my CMA designation, I am aspiring to work in the field of budgeting and planning and later in consulting. I was attracted to the CMA designation because of its diverse career opportunities and mix of management, strategy and accounting. Individuals with their CMA designation work in numerous fields for multitudes of companies. A CMA is not just a stereotypical accountant. There is virtually no limit to where a CMA can work and this is the message I want to get across to Ryerson students in the 2011/2012 school year as CMA ambassador. Throughout the year I will work with student groups and faculty in order to hold events to spread the news of CMA and its benefits. As CMA ambassador, I will represent the CMA designation with respect and professionalism in order to best benefit the student body. I look forward to meeting all accounting students to help inform and guide them to the designation that suits them best. I am also excited to be the CMA ambassador for Ryerson University students to help everyone learn about CMA and the opportunities the designation can lead to in the future.

If you would like to contact Mitchell, feel free to email him at cma.ryerson@gmail.com

For further information about becoming a CMA Ambassador, please contact Monyem Raza directly at mraza@cmaontario.org.