

2011-12 CMA STUDENT AMBASSADOR – Josh Saxe – Seneca College – Bachelor of Accounting and Finance

I am a second year student in the Accounting and Finance program at Seneca College. I am an active member in the Student Leaders of Accounting and Financial Services (SLAFS) at Seneca and was responsible for organizing catering for Seneca's fall networking event. I am also involved in Seneca's Free Tax Clinic which allows students the opportunity to file their income taxes and allows volunteers to gain valuable experience in the field of income tax filing. Being involved with both of these organizations at Seneca has showed me that it is important to get as much information as you can while attending college and I know that being in this position will enable me to help my fellow students acquire this information. I look forward to being able to better educate my fellow 'Senecans' about the CMA designation and what it can do for them in their careers. I know that having the connection to SLAFS will better enable me to organize many fun and interesting events during the school year.
