Budgeting & Forecasting Best Practices

Session Overview

Budgeting and forecasting is one of the critical responsibilities to effectively manage the operations of the business. The budgets and comparatives to actual financial results lead to many key decisions affecting compensation, headcount, strategy, and production. However, many organizations struggle to produce budgets in a timely manner while others have a difficult time explaining the variances between the actual results and budgets.

To address these issues, this session will cover the best practices in budgeting / forecasting. First, there will be an open discussion on the common problems that many organizations face related to the budgeting / forecasting process. Next, a variety of budgeting methods will be covered followed by offering best practices to help improve your current budgeting / forecasting process.

Learning Objectives

This session will provide attendees with:

- a different perspective on how others approach budgeting
- multiple budgeting methodologies
- best practices for budgeting / forecasting

Who Should Attend

This session is geared towards CMAs and all staff within the organization who are closely involved with budgeting, forecasting, financial analysis and performance management. Anyone who wishes to improve on any of these areas should attend the session.
